My personal skills and qualities:

I take pride in being punctual and dependable. My academic experiences have allowed me to develop key subject knowledge and understand the importance of skills such as critical thinking. I believe it is important for students to expand their learning and understand how to think and rationalise ideas. I have developed strong positive relationships with both students and staff. My ability to build rapport quickly with students allows me to form positive and engaging learning environments grounded in mutual respect. I constantly reflect on my practice and feedback from others which allows me to continually develop and improve in both a personal and professional capacity. My aim as a teacher is to inspire an enthusiasm for physical education and sport to help build character and skills for life.

My other interests and hobbies:

I am passionate about sport and physical activity and enjoy keeping myself active through regular weight training. Staying up to date with research in the strength and conditioning field allows me to inform my own training to help improve my health, fitness, and well-being. I enjoy playing in a 5-a-side league weekly, feeding my desire for competition and allowing me the opportunity to socialise with friends. I coach a boys' football team. I enjoy spending time with family and in the outdoors. My best-loved place is at the top of Skiddaw, my favourite climb in the Lake District. Hiking and other outdoor adventure activities allow me the opportunity to clear my head and achieve a healthy work-life balance.
